primary resembles a general election - when voters choose among the candidates from each office. In a primary, however, the voter launches its vote to determine who will go to the general elections. This is a primary in a few words. Although the primary are simpler than the caucus - which also help choosing the candidate of a party for the president - the primary process as a whole is a bit twisted. Progress can be closed or open. For simplicity, we start with the primary closed. In this type, only registered voters affiliated with a certain part have the possibility of going to surveys to express their vote for their candidate chosen within that part. In primary closed, only Republicans can vote for Republicans and Democrats for Democrats. Independent voters - those who opted to choose NA @ Party, but are voters registered - is not allowed to launch a vote. A primary closed can be modified to allow the independents to launch a vote for a candidate on one side or another (this is called semi-closed primary). In Open Primaries, a voter can launch his vote for both sides. In most cases, the voter must choose a part to vote to make a public declaration at the Polling Station. In this circumstance, the voter will talk about the electoral volunteer that starts him or she chooses to vote. He or she will then receive a vote containing candidates for that party. In some open areas, voters can vote for more than one candidate. The voter has to wait until the end of the primary period, which may last for several days or weeks. In some states, the primary period is limited to a specific time, such as the first Tuesday after the first Monday in June. However, in some states, the primary period is not limited by time, but stopped after a decision of the United States Supreme Court established them unconstitutional. It survives mainly in Louisiana in a form called "Primary primary of the non-partisan blanket". Who should a primary advantage of the blanket? Apart from a change of heart of the last minute to the surveys, because it would be a democratic vote for a republican candidate or A Republican for a Democratic? The simple answer is the strategy. Some voters use the primary to vote for the candidate of the other party who has the minimum bit Saxibles to win in the general presidential election. The reasoning goes so that if sufficient voters of the opposite party vote for a river candidate in sufficient primary, which the candidate will continue to win the opposing party nomination for the president. If it happens, then disingenuous voters can launch their vote for the candidate of their party in general elections, and their candidate "hopefully" - disconcerted the malcontented candidate on the other side. Regarding in which kind of primary â â or caucus - is used by a state, the point is to award the delegates to candidates on their way to the national convention. So what's all this on delegates? Discover the role of delegates on the next page.
