As we get older, we are able to solve progressively harder riddles. Hopefully, you are reading this article because you are ready for a challenge. Let's start with some preparation, just in case you need it. Tips for Solving Hard Riddles Think long and hard before you attempt an answer. Riddles are designed so that the first answer you think of is usually wrong. The goal is to misdirect you by presenting what appears to be an obvious answer. Stop and think some more before you take a guess. Practice by solving progressively harder riddles. This article starts with some hard, short, one-line riddles. Then we have some hard "What Am I?" riddles. Next, we challenge you with some long story riddles. Finally, we have some tough logic riddles to really challenge your mind. Each time you successfully answer a riddle, your ability to solve riddles becomes better. Look for patterns, hints, and ask yourself, "What is really the question here?" You will notice that some riddles are based upon letters and some on numbers. Sometimes, the answer is built right into the riddle. Some riddles are based upon double meanings, for example, words like haul and hall. Once you begin to notice the patterns, solving riddles becomes easier. Break down the riddle into parts and answer each one. Longer riddles are easier to solve if you break them down into parts and answer each one. This works especially well for logic and story riddles. Remember that every word and punctuation mark is important. Repeating the riddle can help you find the solution. Read the riddle multiple times or ask the person who is reciting the riddle to say it more than once. Familiarity with the words in the riddle helps and the more you read the riddle, the more you are apt to see the clues that provide an answer. Now, it's time to challenge yourself with some hard riddles with answers! Short Hard Riddles Our hard, short, one-line riddles are great for sharing with your friends and family. They are easy to remember, fun, and help relieve stress. These short, hard riddles work well for a team game; see which team can answer the most riddles. Remember, if you choose to share a story riddle, you do not have to do so verbatim. You can vary the names and the story as long as the clues are included in the right order. See how you can with our hard story riddles. The Most Intelligent Prince A king wants his daughter to marry the smartest of three extremely intelligent young princes, and so the king's wise men devise an intelligence test. The princes are gathered into a room and seated, facing one another. They are shown two black hats and three white hats. They are blindfolded, and one hat is placed on each of their heads. The remaining hats hidden in a different room. The king tells the three princes that the first prince to deduce the color of his hat without removing it or looking at it will marry his daughter. A wrong guess will mean death. The blindfolds are removed. You are one of the princes. You see two white hats on the other prince's heads. After some time, you realize that the other princes are confused about the color of their hat, or are afraid to guess. After some thought, you tell the king the color of your hat. What is it? You guess your hat is white and are correct. The king would not select two white hats and one black hat. This would mean two princes would see one black hat and one white hat. You would be at a disadvantage if you were the only prince wearing a black hat. If you were wearing the black hat, it would not take long for one of the other princes to deduce he was wearing a white hat. If an intelligent prince saw a white hat and a black hat, he would eventually realize that the king would never select two black hats and one white hat. Any prince seeing two black hats would instantly know he was wearing a white hat. If a prince can see one black hat, he can work out he is wearing white. Therefore, the only fair test is for all three princes to be wearing white hats. The Captain's Story The captain of a ship told an interesting story. "I have traveled the oceans far and wide. One time, two of my sailors were standing on opposite sides of the ship. One was looking west and the other one east. And at the same time, they could see each other clearly. Can you tell me how that was possible?" The sailors were standing back against the sides of the ship so they were looking at each other. A poor farmer went to the market to sell his peas and lentils. However, he had only one sack and didn't want to mix peas and lentils. So, he poured in the peas first, tied the sack in the middle, and then filled the top portion of the sack with the lentils. At the market an innkeeper happened by with his own empty sack. He wanted to buy the peas, but he did not want the lentils. Pouring the seed anywhere else but the sacks was not possible. Trading sacks would not work, nor did the farmer wish to cut a hole in his sack. How did the farmer transfer his peas to the innkeeper's sack? Pour the lentils into the innkeeper's sack, tie it off and turn it inside out. Pour in the peas. Then untie the sack a pour the lentils back into the farmer's sack. A young man is arrested while on vacation for a minor infraction. He is put in a cell with a dirt floor and only one window. Although the window has no bars, it is too high for him to reach. The only thing in the cell is a shovel. He has two days to escape or he'll die. The man can't dig a tunnel because it will take him much longer than two days to do it. How will he escape from the cell? He uses the shovel to create a pile of dirt under the window so he can climb up onto it and escape from the cell. On the first day of school, someone murdered the English teacher. There were four people at the school that the police suspected had done it: the janitor, a history teacher, a basketball coach, and the principal. These were their alibis: The janitor said he was cleaning the bathrooms. The history teacher said he was giving a mid-year test. The basketball coach said he was running practice drills with his players. The principal said he was in his office. After giving their alibies, the police arrested the killer immediately. Who killed the English teacher and how did the police know? The history teacher killed the English teacher. He said he was giving a mid-year test, but it was the first day of school.
