Between September 1, 2005 and August 31, 2006 with the willow of Great Britain, the unknown length and the core “I didn’t want to risk my health, I said it doesn’t matter if the Malfoy line died with me – no matter what my father said. But Astoria is a”” He did not want a baby by the name of Malfoy, for PureBlood or Gloria, but for us. Our Child, Scorpio, was born ... It was the best day of both our lives, although considerably weakened Astoria. We hid, the three of us. I wanted to preserve its strength ... and so the rumors began. The pain and happiness caused by the birth of Scorpius [SRC] Scorpius Hyperion Malfoy (B. 2006) was a British thoroughbred magician [1] and the only son and son of Draco and Astoria Malfoy (NAA© and greengrass). [6] He attended Hogwarts School of Witchcraft and Wizardry from 2017 onwards and was a classmate of Rose Granger-Weasley and Albus Potter. Scorpius quickly struck a friendship with Albus, one who in time would become very deep. He, however, struggled with a mistaken belief held by many against him that he was secretly the son of Lord Voldemort and not Draco Malfoy. Biography Early Life (2006 – 2017) Scorpius was born around 2006 in Draco Malfoy and Astoria Greengrass. Scorpius was raised in Malfoy Manor and was said to have inherited his father’s appearance and grandfather’s look; Blonde hair, grey eyes and a pale pointed face. In contrast to his parents and grandparents, Scorpius was not raised with traditional pureblood beliefs that taught him to regard moles and non-pureblood magicians as inferior, so he was much more tolerant of them. Childhood for Scorpius was one of solitary confinement within Malfoy Manor. She had no interactions with children her age before she started participating in Hogwarts. Scorpius read the Malfoy collection of books and became well informed about the world of the wizard, the Second Guided War and Harry Potter. Years of Hogwarts (2017 “?) First year” So it’s little Scorpius. Make sure you beat him in every test, Rosie”. Àé â ~ “Ron Weasley to his daughter after seeing Scorpius [Src] Scorpio with her parents before boarding the Hogwarts Express in 2017, Scorpius was accompanied by her parents to King’s Cross Station to go to her first year at Hogwarts School of Witchcraft and Wizardry. Others in his year included Albus Potter and Rose Granger-Weasley; Rose was discouraged by her father to become “too friendly” with Scorpius and was encouraged to beat him in every test. [3] Scorpius sat in an empty compartment on the Hogwarts Express until he was later joined by Albus and Rose. He showed up clumsily and said he had sweets they could share. Rose decided to leave but Albus stayed, joking that she only did for the sweets. They shared sweets along with stories on their journey Hogwarts, beginning their friendship. Scorpius was ordered to Serpeverde and sat next to Albus at the departure party. He’s had a hard time in Hogwarts since his fellow students joked about his kinship while they tooAlbus To be a potter in Slytherin. In any case, he and Albus became great friends and Scorpius encouraged him to ignore what the students were saying about them. He also had a cooked for roses, but she has not returned him feelings of him. Third year just before the third year in Hogwarts, in the summer of 2019, Scorpius lost his mother to a disease that left him and him father of him pain-they and heart broken. Meeting Albus on the platform 93Â 4, he asked his friend to come to the funeral. Fourth year Fleeing The Hogwarts Express Scorpius with his best friend Albus Potter before going to school for his fourth year, Albus told his father who was having a difficult time at school. Harry was wounded by this and thought that Scorpius was why, asking Albus to put an end to his friendship with him, but Albus refused to give up the best friend of him. On Hogwarts Express, when Albus told him of his meeting with Amos Diggory and the discovery of a Time-Turner, they made a plan to recover the Time-Turner and go back in time to save Cedric Diggory. They tried to jump from the train going up to the roof through a window just to find the witch of the cart, which tried to prevent them from leaving the train moving. Later they managed to find Delphi, who had agreed to help Albus. Working with Delphini Albus, Scorpius, and Delphini disguised by Polyjuice’s use traveled to St Oswald’s Home for old witches and wizards where Amos Diggory and Delphi met. They accepted a plan and with the help of Delphi, Albus, Scorpius and Delphi used Polyjuice Poton to disguise like Ron, Harry and Hermione respectively and entered the Ministry of Magic. Scorpius, like Harry, helped solve a series of puzzles from the Hermione library where they finally discovered and stolen the Time-Turner. Leaving Delphi behind, Albus and Scorpius used the Time-Turner to go to the first task of the Triwizard tournament, where they dressed as Darmstrang students and intervened with the part of Cedric making him lose the wand. After five minutes, they returned to the present. Albus and Scorpius discovered that they had created an alternative reality where Cedric was still dead, and Hermione and Ron had never been united, which means that roses didn’t exist anymore. Albus is no longer in Slytherin and Harry says Albus will have to end his friendship with Scorpius and who will keep an eye on him to make sure he does it. Albus and Scorpius in the alternative temporal line returned to normal school life where Albus and Scorpius didn’t speak more. In the end, Delphi showed himself in Hogwarts and reconciled Albus and Scorpius. They decided to put their right mistake and hoped that, intervening with the second task, they would correctly save Cedric. They succeeded and returned to the present only to find that they had created another alternative reality. survived and became an Eater of Death. Cedric killed Neville Longbottom, who was crucial to Voldemort’s defeat, which he won instead. Harry Potter died dead Albus no longer existed, leaving only Scorpius to try and just their mistake. In the alternative timeline Draco is the head of the magical law enforcement, Dolores Umbridge is the head of Hogwarts and Scorpius is known as the “Scorpion King.” With the help of resistance fighters Severus Snape, Ron, and Hermione, Scorpius later managed to change time again by time-traveling back into the past and using a shield charm to stop the other self-intervention. Restores the original timeline along with Albus and flips into existence. Scorpius and Albus returned to the present through the Great Lake, where they were found by their parents. With Harry’s approval, they were allowed to keep their friendship. They tell their parents they lost the Time-Turner, although Scorpius later admitted to Albus that he knows he lost it in the lake. They decided to retrieve it and destroy it. They invited Delphi to help. Trapped in 1981 When they met her, Scorpius noticed that Delphi had an Auguruy tattoo, which reminded him of a witch in the alternate reality where Voldemort won. He realized it was lifted by the vovlies, who were well known eaters of death. Delphi then revealed that he never intended to destroy Time-Turner, and that he hoped to revive Lord Voldemort. She shot their wands and killed Craig Bowker Jr who was sent to find them, before he made an albus and Scorpius went back in time with her to the third task of the Triwizard tournament. Albus and Scorpius, knowing that the Time-Turner had only held them in the past for five minutes, tried to stall Delphi and ended up meeting the cedar dam in the labyrinth. Cedric helped Albus and Scorpius and reclaimed the Time-Turner, believing it was part of the tournament. As he left, Albus and Scorpius told him that his father Amos loved him. However, Delphi managed to go back in time and went back in time until October 30, 1981, the day before James and Lily Potter died. Delphi then destroyed the Time-Turner and left, abandoning Albus and Scorpius. Scorpius is reunited with his father believing Delphi hoped to kill Harry alone so that the spell would not bounce on Voldemort. Albus and Scorpius went to Godric’s Hollow and saw James and Lily alive with their baby Harry. Warning everyone in the future what is happening, Albus and Scorpius used Harry’s blanket to send a message over time. Harry, Ron, Ginny and Draco deciphered the message and used a more advanced timer to go back to 1981 and join their children. Ginny made Delphi only meant to stop stopping Voldemort at home and murdering the potters, so his fall never happened. Harry transfigured himself to look like Voldemort and planned to learn Delphi. Delphi begged Voldemort, actually Harry, to accept her. However, the spelling of faded and Delphi and Harry dued have dued. Scorpius and the others joined Harry and eventually stopped Delphi. They then returned to the present. Back to a Time After their traumatic experiences with the time-turner, Albus and Scorpius returned to normal life and Scorpius asked Rose, and she refused, but Scorpius was excited because he had pity in his eyes and did not hate, saying that “it was a basis for a palace of love” and Rose then spoke to Scorpius and called him “Scorpion King” then went off with a smile on his face. The physical aspect Scorpius inherited the physical traits of his father Draco, which meant he probably had blond hair, gray eyes, and a pale face pointed. He was also noted for searching for almost the same as his father at the age of eleven. It was said to look like Draco as much as Albus Potter looked like Harry Potter. [4] Personality and traits “The world changes and we change with it. I’m better in this world. But the world is no better. And I don’t want it.” – Scorpius chooses to renounce being ‘king’ of a Hogwarts in a world ruled by Voldemort[src] Scorpius has been shown to be a brave, intelligent and understanding individual. However, despite its traits it was proved to be incredibly alone and insecure, which suffered from a slight depression during his childhood and future years in Hogwarts. Scorpius was noticed to be extremely kind, according to Albus. Scorpius was known to have a personality that Albus and himself describe as “nerdy” and “geeky”, and was known to be something of a loner. An excessive social expulsion, Scorpius relies on his romantic and loving personality to lighten his burdens in life. His particular feature was his long-standing romantic interest in Rose Granger-Weasley, cousin of his best friend and unreachable goal. Scorpius was quite persistent when he wanted something and vaguely shows his ambitious side in the fact that no other girl has ever taken her eye before, potentially referring to another part of her identity, he himself had yet to understand. Her neutral general desire to restore Rose’s existence to the timeline shows that her interest in her was apparently more than just a student crush to the public and can be implied that he actually loves her. However, this despair to restore a timeline was flanked by the overwhelming relationship between Scorpius and Albus and by the confirmation from Snape that Scorpius was generally “give his kingdom” restoring timelines for Albus. [7] Living in a timeline without Albus being his friend has been shown to be more unbearable and sad for Scorpius than living in a timeline without the existence of Roses entirely. [8] Albus Potter: “No. They’re not true. And I’ll tell you why. Because I don’t think Voldemort is capable of having a kind son and you’re kind, Scorpius. To the depths of the belly, to the tips of the fingers. I really think that Voldemort — Voldemort nothane a child like you.” Scorpius Malfoy: “That’s nice - it’s a nice thing to say.” → Albus reassures Scorpius about his absolute goodness[src] Scorpius was also known to be prone to feelings ofHis jealousy was shown when Scorpius observed that Albus was interested in a girl named Delphi. In an alternate timeline when Albus was ordered by his father to stay away from Scorpius, Delphi admitted that in the letters Albus wrote to her, he could sense Scorpius’ absence from his life. Scorpius twisted that he seemed to have found another shoulder to cry on and asked how many owls they sent to each other. Through his indirect commentary, this jealousy may be deferred, but it was unknown what these complicated feelings really meant. In another alternate timeline where Albus was never born and Voldemort ruled, Scorpius was apparently more of a bully, as he would have forced Craig Bowker Jr to do his homework for him. The Scorpius who inadvertently made this turn of the timeline was rather surprised and shocked at this revelation. Magic Skill and Ability Possessions His Wand Relationships The Scorpius parents had a close relationship with both of his parents. She loved her mother very much, and was very grieved by her death. She thought she saw the best in him and her father. Her relationship with her father was slightly different, but she loved and admired him very much, believing she could depend on him to save him. She trusted her father who trusted her for comfort after her mother’s death and had her approval for her friendship with Albus. Astoria and Draco raised Scorpius up with the love and affection they did not have when they were children, and took care of him and his welfare. Unlike Draco himself, they did not ruin Scorpius, nor did they teach him the historical prejudices of their families against Muggles. In fact, when Scorpius and Albus were facing punishment for using the Time-Turner that caused a catastrophic change in reality (which he managed to reverse), Draco was ready to accept whatever punishment Professor McGonagall was about to give to the students. Albus Potter Severus Snape: “Listen to me, Scorpius. Think about Albus. You’re giving up your kingdom for Albus, right? One person. It only takes one person. I couldn’t save Harry for Lily. So now I give my alliance to the cause you believe in. And it’s possible â that along the way I started to believe in it itself.” Scorpius Malfoy: “The world changes and we change with it. I feel better in this world. But the world is no better. And I don’t want it”. â Snape comparing Scorpius’ love for Albus to his love for Lily, Albus is Scorpius’ happy thought of keeping the dementors at bay[src] Scorpius with his best friend Albus Scorpius became friends with Albus Potter when they met on the Hogwarts Express during the Their first trip to Hogwarts, although Albus was the son of Harry Potter, the former archbishop of Scorpius’ father. They showed up embarrassingly and shared a space, Sweets and stories. They were then put together with Slytherin and approached their early years in Hogwarts, even though they were made around other others Albus became isolated because of the jokes that they made about him who drove Harry to believe Scorpius was also affecting him. He said albus to end his friendship with Scorpius who refused to do. In their fourth year, Scorpius decided to help ALBUS change the past from time to time in 1994 and trying to save the cedar’s dash. In an alternative reality, they did not speak to each other for a few weeks when Harry told Albus to put their friendship again, which immensely upset Scorpius. Regardless of this, the two later invented and became another time trip. Scorpius was shocked when he discovered that they had created another alternative reality where Albus no longer existed, and resolved to remove the right time. Scorpius and Albus in Hogwarts was later happily reunited with Albus where he embraced him while submerged in water. On their next journey in time, he helps Harry Duel Delphi. Later they returned to normal school life, with Harry’s approval to be friends again. The two boys are known to also have a rather tight relationship in which they often approach than embrace. Rose Granger-Weasley Albus Potter: “Rose hates you.” Scorpius Malfoy: “Correction, he hated me, but did you see the look in his eyes when I asked? It was not hatred, that was pity.” Albus Potter: “Is piety good?” Scorpius Malfoy: “Peccato is a beginning, my friend, a foundation on which to build a palace - a palace of love”. â € “The guess of the first attempt (unsuccessful) to ask the rose outside [Src] Scorpius was apparently romantically interested in Rose Granger-Weasley, complimenting her saying that it smelled something cute,” as a mixture of fresh and fresh flowers Pane “. [14] After helping to restore the existence of the rose in the current chronology, he tried to embrace it after having called it “the head of the bread”, but was welcomed with a kick to the shin. At the end of his fourth year, Scorpius asked, however, he was rejected. It is interesting to note that, at the last moment, Rose passed Scorpius and Albus on the stairs. He said, “This will only be strange if you let it be strange,” he replied, “receipt and totally understood.” He called it “Scorpion King” and went away with a smile on his face. [15] It is unknown what it means. Etymology The word Scorpius is Latin for “snake”. As his father (and for an extension of the black family), Scorpius takes its name from a constellation, carrying on the tradition of giving astronomical names, begun by the family of his paternal grandmother. In Western astrology, it is the sign of Scorpio and is connected in Greek mythology to Ades, God of the Underworld, as well as the scorpion that killed the hunter Orion. In Greek mythology, Hyperion was one of the twelve Titans eventually overthrown by the Olympians. He was also known to help overthrow his father, Ouranus. It is also the name of one of the moons of di and an unfinished poem by John Keats. Behind the scenes Scorpius is currently portrayed by actor Jonathan Case in the original West End production of Harry Potter and the Cursed Child. Among others, Irish actor Anthony Boyle[16] and Samuel Blenkin. In 2019, Bubba Weiler took over the role of Anthony Boyle in the Broadway production.[17] Melbourne’s original cast included Will McKenna as Scorpius Malfoy, who was nominated for the Helpmann Award for his performance.[18] In the second year of the Melbourne production, Scorpius was portrayed by Nyx Calder.[19] Since 2020, Mathias Reiser has portrayed him in the Hamburg production.[20] Scorpius is portrayed by Bertie Gilbert in a short scene of Harry Potter and the Gifts of Death: Part 2. His face has never been shown, and appears only briefly as he is embraced by his mother. Bertie Gilbert claimed on Twitter that he shot a scene in which Scorpius turns and confronts Harry. This can appear as a deleted scene in Blu-Ray or Ultimate Edition. It’s not on the DVD. Scorpius is a fourth cousin of his classmates Rose Granger-Weasley and Albus Potter, and their brothers Hugo Granger-Weasley, James Sirius Potter, and Lily Luna Potter, as they are all descendants of Phineas Nigellus Black. In the game Harry Potter Lego, Scorpius winks at Rose Granger-Weasley while she is on the train, perhaps suggesting he is flirting with her. This is corroborated by the fact that he asked her to go out to school during the Cursed Child episode of the series. Scorpius is Teddy Lupin’s second cousin. Scorpius was the penultimate character introduced into the Harry Potter books. Scorpius seems to have a heroic adoration of Harry Potter, as he seems to have a high regard for Harry. Scorpius has a knowledge and understanding of Harry Potter through the study of the magician during his childhood. Also, when he came out of Black Lake, Scorpius was thrilled to see Harry Potter. Scorpius once had an imaginary friend named Flurry. They once argued about proper Gobstones rules. Flurry’s name was changed to Hector in the Melbourne production of Harry Potter and The Cursed Child. Gallery appearance The Harry Potter Wiki has 30 images related to Scorpius Malfoy.
