It is again that time: one Schefosse app series have been made Road to Google Play Store, and it's up to you to make sure you don't have them on your Android phone. If you do, you have just been sucked by Å ¢ ¢~ Å "fleeceware". " What Å ¢ ¢~ ¢ "fleecheware? Å. ¢.~ "confessed, is the term that I have not often heard, but it is substantially deceptive marketing. An app is born its terms, fees and // or subscription costs, or otherwise it has some intelligent way to Make you culative to subscribe to Å ¢ ¢~ Å "N-Gree Trial" that actually expires very soon and costs much more than you expected when it's finished. These aren - t malware apps per if - at least, they won "t infect the phone with a harmful shit that tries to steal your account information or everything - they simply take your money. The worst part? Gave the rules for The Google Play Store just enough to avoid being hit with the Google Ban hammer. As Sophos writes: Å ¢ ¢~ "The list of the apps we reported to Google, the company refused to act on all except some , and in those cases, the apps change as they show the description and free trial terms, removing the only violations. The publishers, at their discretion, can charge unconsciously high subscription prices as long as they respect these anti-deceptive practices in their promotions. We understand it is difficult to provide a fixed price for an app service, but when the app is subjected to review, surely the auditors can easily separate a dadgy photographic editor that recharges $ 90 per week by a reliable developer that loads a price fair for an app with professional or premium features. Å ¢ ¢~ speaking in general, you should always step away very much, very carefully when an app offers a free trial - especially if the app already seems a bit underdeveloped, Å It's full of poor grammar, or feels like the type of app that you probably don't need to have in-app purchases, allow other subscriptions. Know exactly what you are by registering, how hard, and what happens to you when it's over. This includes how much you take turnover and billing frequency for your new subscription, if applicable. If you don't crystalline of these details, it's up to the app and uninstall it. If you are not sure what you might have just registered, or previously registered, you can always check your Android subscriptions here. Make it a regular point to visit that page to make sure you don't pay something you're not going to want.
