Mary Sibley (April 21, 1660 - c. 1761) was an important but minor figure in the historical record of the Salem Witch Trials in the Massachusetts Colony in 1692. She was a neighbor of a Parisian family who advised John Indian to become a witch. cake. The denunciation of this act isthis is considered one of the triggers for the ensuing witch craze. Known For: Key role in the Salem witch trials of 1692 Born: April 21, 1660 in Salem, Essex, Massachusetts Parents: Benjamin and Rebecca Canterbury Woodrow. 1761 Education: unknown. Spouse: Samuel Sibley (or Siblehahi, or Sibley), February 12, 1656/1257-1708. m. 1686 Children: at least 7 years Mary Sibley was a real person, born Mary Woodrow April 21, 1660 in Salem, Essex, Massachusetts. Her parents, Benjamin Woodrow (1635-1697) and Rebecca Canterbury (spelled Catebrui or Cantlebury, 1630-1663), were born in Salem to English parents. Maria had at least one brother Józef/Józef born around 1663. Rebekah died when Mary was about 3 years old. Nothing is known of her education, but in 1686, when Mary was about 26 years old, she married Samuel Sibley. Their first two children were born before 1692, one was born in 1692 (son William), and four others were born after the Salem events after 1693. Mary Sibley's husband had a sister, Mary, who was married to Captain Jonathan Walcott or Walcott. married and their daughter was Mary Walcott. Mary Walcott became one of the witch accusers in Salem County in May 1692, when she was about 17 years old. Ann Foster was among the defendants. Mary Walcott's father, John, remarried after the death of Samuel's sister, Mary, and Mary Walcott's new stepmother was Deliverer Putnam Walcott, sister of Thomas Putnam Jr. Thomas Putnam Jr. was one of Salem's attorneys, as were his wife and daughter Ann Putnam Sr. and Ann Putnam Jr. In January 1692, two girls in the home of the Rev. Samuel Parris, Elizabeth (Betty) Parris and Abigail Williams, aged 9 and 12, developed very strange symptoms, and an enslaved woman from the Caribbean, Tituba, also experienced images of the devil - all later testimony. A doctor diagnosed a "bad hand" as the cause, and Mary Sibley pitched the idea for witch cookies to John Indian.A Caribbean man from the Parris family. The main piece of evidence in the group's trial was witch cakes, a popular folk magic tool made from the urine of afflicted girls. Sympathetic magic was meant to mean that the cake would contain the "evil" that was tormenting them, and if the dog ate the cake, it indicated the witches were tormenting it. Although apparently it was a well-known practice in English folk culture. To identify the alleged witches, Reverend Parris himself denounced the well-intentioned use of magic in his Sunday sermon, as it can also be "diabolical" (works of the devil). The witch cake couldn't stop the suffering of the two girls. Instead, several other damsels in distress showed up: Ann Putnam Jr. she was related to Mary Sibley through her husband and Elizabeth Hubbard's brother-in-law. Mary Sibley confessed to the church that she was wrong, and the congregation showed their approval of her confession by raising their hands. Perhaps this way she avoided being accused of being a witch. The following month, the city records record her suspension from Communion and Restoration until she is fully admitted to the Congregation when she goes to confession. March 11, 1692 - Mary, wife of Samuel Sibley, who was suspended from fellowship with the Church for advising John [Tituba's husband] to conduct the above experiment, is reinstated after confessing her intention. he was innocent." Neither Mary nor Samuel Sibley are listed on the 1689 Salem Village Church Register, so they must have joined after that date. According to genealogy records, she lived long into the 1990s and died around 1761. The 2014 Salem Supernatural script series by WGN America "Salem" Janet Montgomery starred in this fictional character Mary Sibley, who is a real-life witch. She is the most powerful witch in Salem in the fictional universe. Her maiden name is Mary Wolcott, similar but not the sameThe name Woodrow is the real Mary Sibley. The other Mary Wolcott in the real world of Salem was the chief prosecutor at age 17, the niece of Anne Putnam the elder and the cousin of Anne Putnam the younger. This Mary Wolcott (or Wolcott) in real Salem was the niece of Mary Sibley's husband, Samuel Sibley, who baked the witch pie. The producers of Salem appear to have combined the characters of Mary Wolcott and Mary Sibley, nieces and aunts, to create a completely fictional character. In the series pilot, the fictional Mary Sibley helps her husband push away a frog. In this version of the Salem Wizard tale, Mary Sibley is married to George Sibley and is the former lover of John Alden (who is much younger in the show than in the real Salem). The heroine, Countess Marburg, is a German witch and horrible villain who has lived an unnaturally long life. At the end of the second season, Tituba and the Countess die, and Maria stays for another season. In the end, Maria regrets her decision. She and her lover reconcile and fight for the future together. Pedigree.com. Massachusetts, Town and Vital Records, 1620-1988 [database online]. Provo, UT, USA: Ancestry.com Operations, Inc., 2011.
